These Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) were prepared by the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinical Program (HIRC). HIRC provides free consultations and legal representation to members of the Harvard community who are undocumented or DACAmented or have Temporary Protected Status (TPS). The responses to the FAQs listed below are informational and do not constitute legal advice. Every case is different, and advice will vary depending on the individual circumstances of each student. This guidance is valid as of January 24, 2018 12 p.m.

If you currently have TPS status, please contact HIRC as soon as possible to set up an individual in-person legal consultation. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado, at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

Recently the Department of Homeland Security has announced its determinations to terminate TPS designations for Sudan, Nicaragua, Haiti and El Salvador. If you currently have TPS from either Sudan, Nicaragua, Haiti or El Salvador, please contact our office as soon as possible to discuss potential remedies beyond TPS.

What is TPS?
TPS is a federal program that provides limited immigration law benefits to eligible nationals of certain designated countries. The Secretary of Homeland Security may designate a foreign country for inclusion in TPS based on a determination that conditions in the country temporarily prevent the country’s nationals from returning safely, or that the country is unable to handle the return of its nationals adequately. USCIS may grant TPS benefits to eligible nationals of such designated countries (or parts of countries), who are already in the United States. Eligible individuals without nationality who last resided in the designated country may also be granted TPS benefits.

The Secretary may designate a country for TPS due to the following temporary conditions in the country:

- Ongoing armed conflict (such as civil war)
- An environmental disaster (such as earthquake or hurricane), or an epidemic
- Other extraordinary and temporary conditions

During a designated period, individuals who are TPS beneficiaries or who are found preliminarily eligible for TPS upon initial review of their cases (prima facie eligible):

- Are not removable from the United States
- Can obtain an employment authorization document (EAD)
- May be granted “advance parole”: i.e., an entitlement to travel abroad and return to the United States.
Once granted TPS, an individual also cannot be detained by DHS on the basis of his or her immigration status in the United States.

TPS is a temporary benefit that does not provide a pathway to lawful permanent resident status. However, registration for TPS does not prevent you from:

- Applying for nonimmigrant status
- Filing for adjustment of status based on an immigrant petition
- Applying for any other immigration benefit or protection for which you may be eligible

PLEASE NOTE: To be granted any other immigration benefit, you must still meet all the eligibility requirements for that particular benefit.

What countries are currently designated for Temporary Protected Status?

Currently the following countries have been designated for TPS. We use “extended through” language to indicate that DHS has not decided to terminate the TPS designation. At some point on or before the “extended through” date, DHS will announce whether it will extend the TPS designation even further. “Scheduled to end” signifies that DHS has determined not to extend the TPS designation for that country, and the TPS termination goes in effect on the date indicated.

Who qualifies for TPS?
Individuals can apply for Temporary Protected Status if they:

- Are nationals of a country designated for TPS, or persons without nationality who last habitually resided in the designated country;
- File during the open initial registration or re-registration period, or meet the requirement for late initial filing during any extension of their country’s TPS designation;
- Have been continuously physically present in the United States since the effective date of the most recent designation date of their country; and
- Have been continuously residing in the United States since the date specified for their country. The law allows an exception to the continuous physical presence and continuous residence requirements for brief, casual and innocent departures from the United States.

Who is not eligible for TPS?
- Individuals who do not meet the initial or late initial TPS registration requirements;
- Individuals who fail to re-register, without good cause, during the re-registration period;
- Individuals who fail to satisfy the continuous residency or continuous physical presence requirement;
- Individuals who have been convicted of either one felony or two misdemeanors;
- Individuals who are found inadmissible under section 212(a) (please note: there are exceptions for people who are inadmissible due to entering without inspection as well as people who have been ordered removed); and
- Individuals who are subject to any of the mandatory bars to asylum.

I currently have TPS but the Department of Homeland Security has stated that it is terminating the designation of TPS for my country. Does my TPS employment authorization card still entitle me to work?
Recently, the Department of Homeland Security announced that it is terminating the TPS designation for Sudan, Nicaragua, Haiti and El Salvador. It also recently announced that it needed further information to make a final determination about Honduras. Expiration dates for TPS employment authorization vary by country, as described further below.

Sudan:
TPS for Sudan is scheduled to end on Nov. 2, 2018. Individuals from Sudan (and individuals having no nationality who last resided in Sudan) who have been granted TPS, wish to maintain their TPS, and receive TPS-based Employment Authorization Documents (EAD) valid through Nov. 2, 2018, must re-register for TPS in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Notice in the Federal Register (82 F.R. 47228). You may renew your EAD at the same time as you re-register. If you did not timely re-register and properly file an EAD application, the validity of your EAD ended on November 2, 2017. You must have properly filed your EAD application... during the 60-day re-registration period, in order for your current EAD to have been automatically extended for 180 days (i.e., through May 1, 2018).

Nicaragua:
TPS for Nicaraguans is scheduled to end on January 5, 2019. Individuals from Nicaragua (and individuals having no nationality who last habitually resided in Nicaragua) who have been granted TPS, wish to maintain their TPS, and an EAD valid through January 5, 2019, must re-register for TPS in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Notice in the Federal Register (82 F.R. 59636). The Notice in the Federal Register automatically extends existing EADs issued under previous TPS designation of Nicaragua with the expiration date of January 5, 2018, for 60 days, through March 6, 2018. You do not need to apply for a new EAD in order to benefit from this 60-day automatic extension. However, if you want to obtain a new EAD valid through January 5, 2019, you must apply for one at the same time as you re-register. You may also apply for the new EAD at a later date, as long as you still have TPS or a pending TPS application.

In addition to an automatic 60-day EAD extension, if you timely re-register for TPS and properly file an application for an EAD, the validity of your EAD will be automatically extended for up to 180 days from the date the current EAD expires, i.e., through July 4, 2018. See 8 CFR § 274a.13(d)(1). You may file the application for your EAD either prior to or after it has expired, in which case your EAD will be automatically extended for up to 180 days (i.e., through July 4, 2018). You are strongly encouraged to properly file your EAD application as early as possible, in order to avoid gaps in your EAD.

Haiti:
TPS for Haitians is scheduled to end on July 22, 2019. Individuals from Haiti (and individuals having no nationality who last habitually resided in Haiti) who have been granted TPS, wish to maintain their TPS and to secure an EAD valid through January 5, 2019, must re-register for TPS by March 19, 2018 in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Notice in the Federal Register (83 F.R. 2648). The Notice automatically extends existing EADs issued under the previous TPS designation of Haiti with the expiration date of January 22, 2018, for 180 days, through July 21, 2018.

Unless you timely re-register, the validity of your current EAD will end on July 21, 2018. It is strongly encouraged that you apply for a new EAD as early as possible to avoid gaps in the validity of your EAD and to ensure that you receive your new EAD by July 22, 2018.

El Salvador:
TPS for Salvadorans is scheduled to end on September 9, 2019. Salvadorans with TPS must re-register by March 19, 2018 for TPS and apply for EADs in order to work in the United States until the termination of El Salvador’s TPS designation in accordance with the procedures set forth in the Notice in the Federal Register (83 F.R. 2654). The Notice automatically extends existing EADs issued under the previous TPS designation of El Salvador with the expiration date of March 9, 2018, for 180 days, through September 5, 2018.
Unless you timely re-register the validity of your current EAD will end on September 5, 2018. It is strongly encouraged that you apply for a new EAD as early as possible to avoid gaps in the validity of your EAD and to ensure that you receive your new EAD by September 5, 2018.

Honduras:
The Department of Homeland Security determined that it could not make a definitive decision concerning the extension of TPS for Hondurans prior to the 60-day period preceding the expiration of Honduran TPS. In order to maintain TPS status Hondurans must re-register by February 13, 2018. Hondurans can continue to work with their current Employment Authorization through July 4, 2018, in accordance with the Notice in the Federal Register (82 F.R. 59630).

The Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic (HIRC) assists with TPS renewal pro bono. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

Does TPS allow me to apply for my green card or any other immigration status?
TPS does not provide a pathway to Permanent Resident Status (green card) or naturalization. However, individuals with TPS status may qualify for other forms of relief independent of TPS.

Individuals with TPS should seek the advice of an attorney to explore possible other forms of relief such as, but not limited to, family-based adjustment of status, employment-based adjustment of status, asylum and withholding of removal, and cancellation of removal.

If you have TPS, please contact the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic (HIRC) for an individual consultation as soon as possible. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

What will happen after my TPS expires?
In order to continue receiving TPS benefits, you must re-register for TPS during the re-registration period that applies to your country of nationality. The Department of Homeland Security must announce the terms of the registration period at least 60 days prior to the expiration of TPS status.

Once TPS expires, a TPS recipient cannot be deported without an opportunity to present his or her case in court, unless the TPS recipient has a prior removal order. Immigration and Customs Enforcement can enforce a prior removal order without initiating new removal proceedings. Additionally, if you were in removal proceedings prior to having TPS, ICE could recommence your prior removal proceedings. It is recommended that individuals from countries where TPS is being terminated speak to an attorney to develop a legal strategy to move beyond TPS status.
Members of the Harvard community can make an appointment by calling the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado, at 617-495-6648 or emailing her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

What kind of safety plan should I come up with?

- Have your immigration information in a place that is quickly accessible and let a family member or friend with immigration status know where this information is, so that he or she can easily access it in case of an emergency.
- Memorize the phone numbers of a qualified lawyer and of a family member or friend with lawful immigration status whom you can call, if picked up by ICE.
- Know what rights you have and what course of action you will take when speaking to immigration enforcement officials. Under the U.S. Constitution, whether you are undocumented or not, you have, for example:
  - The right to remain silent;
  - The right to refuse to open your door to immigration or law enforcement officials who do not have a signed judicial warrant;
  - The right to a lawyer (in immigration proceedings, at your own expense); and
  - The right not to sign any document without first speaking with a lawyer.

Here is a tool that can help to organize your information: http://michiganimmigrant.org/resources/library/family-emergency-checklist-english. You may also wish to speak with your family about planning for an emergency. This tool provides relevant guidance, and attorneys at HIRC are also available to consult about this subject. What rights do I have?

Regardless of your immigration or citizenship status, you have certain constitutional rights. Your rights include:

- The right to remain silent.
- The right to refuse to consent to a search of yourself, your car, or your home without a judicial warrant. Exceptions:
  - Law enforcement officers may search your person (only patting down your outer clothing, not reaching into or squeezing your pockets) or personal belongings, without your consent, if they have a reasonable suspicion (a clear, specific and unbiased reason for suspecting) that you have been involved in a crime, and/or are armed and dangerous.
  - If you have been lawfully arrested, law enforcement can search your person in connection with that arrest.
  - Law enforcement may search your car, without your consent, if they have probable cause (a strong, unbiased, factual reason) for believing that there is evidence of a crime or contraband in the car.

- If you are not under arrest, you have the right to leave the presence of law enforcement. You should do so without incident to avoid potentially violating other laws that can be cause for arrest.
- The right to a lawyer if you are arrested. Ask for one immediately.

Where can I be targeted? Are places like churches and/or schools safe from enforcement?

Historically, ICE has had a policy of not targeting individuals within the confines of the certain types of institutions. However, ICE may still target individuals traveling to and from these institutions or it may change its policies entirely towards these “sensitive locations.”¹

- Current ICE policies provide that the agency will attempt to avoid raids or arrests near sensitive locations such as:
  - Schools, including known and licensed daycares, pre-schools and other early learning programs; primary schools; secondary schools; post-secondary schools up to and including colleges and universities; as well as scholastic or education-related activities or events, and school bus stops that are marked and/or known to the officer, during periods when school children are present at the stop;
  - Medical treatment and health care facilities, including hospitals, doctors’ offices, accredited health clinics, and emergency or urgent care facilities;
  - Places of worship, including churches, synagogues, mosques, and temples;
  - Religious or civil ceremonies or observances, such as funerals and weddings; and
  - During public demonstrations, such as a marches, rallies, or parades.

Can immigration officials conduct deportation activities on Harvard’s campus?
Currently the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) has a policy of not taking “enforcement actions” at “sensitive locations,” including colleges and universities. For more information, see: https://www.cbp.gov/border-security/sensitive-locations-faqs. Enforcement actions covered by this policy include arrests, interviews, searches, and surveillance.

Is it safe to go to the police or to court?
Individuals should go to the police if they feel as though they are in danger. There may be additional immigration benefits available to victims of a crime if they can show they were helpful in the investigation of the crime.

Among others, the following cities in the Boston area have declared themselves “sanctuary cities,” meaning that they will not cooperate with ICE except as required by law:

- Boston: “Will not honor ICE detainer without a criminal warrant.”
  - The Boston Police Commissioner stated on January 31st, 2017 that the Department does not target people based on their immigration status, does not take that status into consideration, and does not consider itself responsible for enforcing immigration laws.
- Cambridge: “Will not honor ICE detainer unless in cases where immigration agents have a criminal warrant or Cambridge officials have a legitimate law enforcement purpose not related to immigration.”
  - Cambridge City Council released the following statement on November 17, 2016: “the Cambridge Police Department does not undertake immigration-related investigations and does not routinely inquire into the specific immigration status of any person encountered during normal police operations.”
- Somerville: “Will not honor ICE detainer unless in cases where immigration agents have a criminal warrant or Cambridge officials have a legitimate law enforcement purpose not related to immigration.”
  - The Mayor of Somerville stated on November 21, 2016, “[O]ur local police and agencies don't profile our residents to run immigration checks on them.”

Further HUPD has confirmed that it will not allow ICE on campus for immigration enforcement purposes without a warrant or other valid legal process. HUPD advises individuals to contact them immediately if in fact they are confronted by an ICE agent on campus.

If you have a matter in civil or criminal court, please contact an immigration attorney. If you are a member of the Harvard University community, please contact the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic’s Staff Attorney, Jason Corral.

As a TPS recipient, is it safe for me to protest and march in rallies?
The Trump Administration has expanded the definition of “criminal alien” for the purpose of prioritizing deportations. If you are arrested at a protest or rally (e.g., for blocking the road), you may fit under the definition of “criminal alien” and be subject to removal.

There are a few precautionary measures you can take if you do plan to attend a protest.

- Check with the organizers to see if they have applied for a permit for the protest. Often, a permitted protest is coordinated ahead of time with authorities to ensure participants’ safety.
- Make sure you have the contact information for a lawyer available. The National Lawyers Guild has legal support hotlines available for people participating in political actions: https://www.nlg.org/massdefensecommittee/.

If you have any concerns regarding your immigration status, please contact the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinic’s Staff Attorney, Jason Corral. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

What should I do if I am detained at an airport?
If you have a lawyer, you should let CBP/ICE/TSA know that you would like to speak with him or her.

If you do not have an attorney, call the local ACLU hotline. To find your local ACLU number, go to https://www.aclu.org/about/affiliates?redirect=affiliates.

There is also an app available to connect with a lawyer in certain airports, including Boston, through AirportLawyer.org.

If you are a member of the Harvard University community, please contact the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinical Program’s (HIRC) Staff Attorney, Jason Corral. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

Additionally, the ACLU has prepared a “Know Your Rights” document regarding what to do when encountering law enforcement at airports and other ports of entry into the U.S.
Can my family members and I fly to Puerto Rico with a driver’s license but no passport? If you have any questions about travel plans, please contact the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinical Program. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu. We strongly urge you not to leave the continental U.S. without first consulting an immigration expert with the Clinic.

CAUTION: If you leave the United States after being ordered deported or removed, USCIS will likely consider you deported or removed. This may make you ineligible to return to the United States in the future.

I have TPS and am or was planning to go abroad with advance parole. What should I do? It is of the utmost importance that individuals with TPS meet with an immigration attorney before leaving the country. Traveling with advance parole is very risky and is subject to the discretion of customs and border enforcement officers at the port of entry. It is possible that somebody could be given advanced parole and denied re-entry. For this reason, individuals are encouraged to discuss the risks of traveling well before making travel plans. To make an appointment with Mr. Corral, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

What are the 3- and 10-year bars, and how do they apply to me? U.S. immigration law provides that certain persons who have been unlawfully present in the United States for a period of time may, if they leave or are removed from the U.S., be barred from reentry for either three or ten years, depending upon the duration of their unlawful presence. The law provides for exceptions, and so application of these bars will depend upon each individual case. You should consult with the Harvard Immigration and Refugee Clinical Program to determine the potential impact of the 3- and 10-year bars on your eligibility for immigration protection. To make an appointment, please call the HIRC paralegal, Nilce Maldonado at 617-495-6648 or email her at nmaldonado@law.harvard.edu.

I am an ally. How can I help? Various bipartisan bills have been introduced that would permanently protected individuals with TPS who have resided in the United States for long periods of time. The bills have varying parameters and include the Extending Status Protection for Eligible Refugee with Established Residency Act, The SECURE Act, and the ASPIRE Act. You can call your congressperson and advocate for passage of legislation that protects individuals with TPS.
